FOREWORD

This, the fifth volume of the Harveyan, is presented with neither solicitations nor apologies. We greet you at the end of our work with felicitations, and find our own reward in accepting the challenge which the publication of the book has offered. Should this book bring to the memory of the gentle reader or observer scenes reminiscent of his or her own life on a college campus, and should the same inspire him or her to new courage and determination, our efforts have not been futile.

Grateful acknowledgment and appreciation is here extended to our faculty advisor, Mr. David Kirby, whose labor with us and carry-on spirit, in the midst of the doldrums, aided greatly in steering our bark safely to the port of Success.

The result of our hands and minds is before you. In your discrimination, may the record herein inscribed and pictured be the means of spurring and inspiring you and us to greater adventures and nobler efforts for the advancement of a Greater Morris Harvey College.

HISTORY OF THE GREATER MORRIS HARVEY CLASS

Early Childhood Vol. I

One bright fall day in September, nineteen hundred twenty-three, the Greater Morris Harvey Class was born on the campus. As all things have a humble beginning, so this class entered first upon the Freshman road. But this Class child, made up of thirty-nine freshmen, found the way rocky and hilly, and a meeting was held at which John Hollister was chosen to head them. On they went, up the hills and down, drinking lightly every now and then from the knowledge wells, but most of the time playing in the pleasant lower-classman valleys. In the meantime they had passed over one great bridge of First Semester Exams, and now at the end of the road was the bridge of Finals, over which they safely passed in sight of Sophomore Land.

Later Childhood Vol. II

The Greater Morris Harvey Class spent their later childhood in gay Sophomore Land, and to direct them in their work and play along this strange road, they chose Carl Radford, who led them past deeper Knowledge wells and brighter Lower-classmen Valleys, and over two more great bridges until they saw in the distance the Upper-classmen hills.

Adolescence Vol. III

It was in Jolly Junior Land that Greater Morris Harvey Class spent his adolescence of youthful activities and pleasures. Vennie C. Kirby was the guide through this beautiful country, and they raced with a joyous freedom over these new found hills of Upper-classdom. This youth was a jolly fellow, and to celebrate the crossing of the big bridge at the end of the Junior road, a banquet in gay reds and whites was given to his Senior brothers.

Adulthood Vol. IV

At last the Greater Morris Harvey Class was grownup and had reached the bright plains of memorable Senior Land, and of the eleven Seniors, Ralph Cunningham was chosen the guide over the stately and beautiful highways of the land. They stopped at many places of work and fun. But as a permanent reminder of their past life, they caused to be made a Senior ring — the college seal bounded by a Guyan river scene on one side and the state flower, the Rhododendron on the other. And a pattern of this ring was left for the use of those still to come to this land. Near the end of the road a play was staged. And finally they came to the great Arch of Commencement under which they eagerly passed to the years of the future.

TO MOTHER

Oh, love bestow on me thy gift,
And count it but vainest folly,
If I should turn in scorn away
From the heart that is nearest home.
To seek the fair of flesh;
The charm and grace of others.
'Tis the gift of God, the love of mother
And curse of Hell to forsake it.
'Tis spring of life
That spreads this love.
'Tis the best of man to know it.
Oh, be thyself, thou mortal man,
And love the heart that's nearest you.

The 100th anniversary of the birth of George Washington was celebrated in various ways in this school. The play was no exception. Wayne, a witness of state, played the part of George Washington. He was a private school, attending a private school, and had a son Tom, who is in the army. The play was a success and the school was proud to have it.

The debate team of this school won the first prize in the annual debate contest. The team consisted of Mr. Frantz and Mr. Yoak. They defeated the team from the other school. The judges were very impressed with their performance.

Mr. Haples

History of Academy Senior Class 1927

'Way back in the year '23, four long years ago, we as a class of "Freshies" entered the doors of Morris Harvey Academy. We were the most intelligent and most charming group that ever graced the halls of this dear old school. We have not lost much of our intelligence for our school years have been too short. We started on a strange adventure which has been a sort of mystery to us all along. But the most of us have arrived to this memorable year successfully.

Although our teachers did make us study, these four years have been in no sense unhappy ones. They are filled with pleasant memories which will serve to enrich our lives in the future.

At the beginning of this year our class met with "Brownie" Fulton as sponsor, and we elected Clara Belle Williams president, with Eloise Vaughan as secretary and treasurer. They have worked very faithfully for the betterment of the Senior class and we certainly appreciate them.

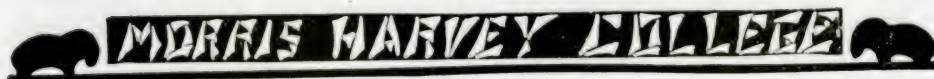

During the first semester, Mr. Fulton called a meeting of the Seniors and told us that we would not have to go to study hall. That gave us a great relief and we showed how much we appreciated it because we never loafed in the halls as our predecessors had done. We always studied—when we thought we had to. During April we gave a class play and everyone said that it was a huge success.

Perhaps it would be well for us to mention each Senior, although no member in our class has risen to fame, we have the belief that their names should go down in history.

Myrtle Lambert is one of the most outstanding girls in our county of Cabell, having won prizes in 4-H work numbers of times in the last four years. Her work in school has proved to both the faculty and students that she is a girl of unusual ability.

"Queenie" Bryant, better known as the "Campus Sheba," just came to us this year. She is a graduate of music, and her work in the various student organizations has been of the best.

Mary Burks, the premier basketball player of our class, has done splendid work both in school and in athletics. Her grades are among the highest in the Academy.

Mary Adkins has won many letters in basketball and we were proud that she was a member of our class.

Calma May has always been the "Cutie" of our class and one of the most popular girls of the academy.

Betty Allen Vallandingham has made a name for herself by her grades. They were among the highest in school and we are sure that she will make good in life.

Eula Hash has made a great name for herself and she has the distinction of having finished high school in two and a half years.

Maxine Honaker, while in high school, has won great fame in her readings. In this line she is very talented and we think that we will hear from her in greater places than Morris Harvey.

Although they came into the class late and have not had time to help us much, Laurel May, Joseph Lanford and Hansford Welch have proven themselves loyal seniors.

Walter Staples brought a very great honor to the Seniors when he was voted the handsomest boy in school and we are proud of him.

Harry Burgess has made a good record in baseball and on the basketball floor also. His most famous basketball battle, we believe, was when M. H. A. played Milton High.

We all know of Earlie Crum because of his profound interest in Latin and his mocking little laugh which protects him from low grades.

Eyla Cackley is our only violinist and she has been trained in almost every department including commercial work, voice, piano, and expression.

Mrs. M. G. Flowers, Mrs. Adkins, Mrs. Leonard and Mr. M. A. Bradford are the only ones in our class that have had the blessed privilege of saying "I will—not" to the preacher.

And we will add in closing that Aileen Ray, Dorothy Shomaker and Olive Rigglesman are our prospective old maids—spinsters—perhaps.

SENIOR CLASS POEM, 1927

Out on a slope there stands a school,
One we will ne'er forget.
Close by the Guyan, that runs so cool,
This dear old building is set.
Many a day we've studied so hard,
Many an hour we've played;
Many a tear was shed unseen
Over a note or a grade.
How can we ever forget the fun?
And the happenings we have seen?
As we say good-bye to M. H. A.
We wish we could come again.

Now is the time we say good-bye,
Now on our lone way we go,
Hard are the tasks we all must try,
M. H. A. you've helped us so.
Morris Harvey, we love you true
For all you've done for us.
Could we but make you understand
That we'll be true to our trust.
Where can our hearts be made more glad?
Where is the sky more blue?
We must leave you now—
Morris Harvey we bid you adieu.

—Mary Lambert.

Joseph Lanford wills to Carl Hinchman his ability to pass chemistry, in the hope that when his Senior year creeps upon him he will not be hindered by a poor grade.

Hansford Welch wills his winning smile to "Baby Face" Truman Murray.

Walter Staples wills his good looks and his ability to play the uke to Emerson Burgess.

(Seal) MORRIS HARVEY SENIOR CLASS

Boots and Cord, Makers and Executors.

Read, signed, sealed and published by the Senior Class of Morris Harvey Acedamy 1927, as the last will and testament, in the presence of the following witnesses: Prince of Wales, "Peaches" Browning, and Henri Ford.

CLASS PROPHECY

As we float down the Guyan on a war steamer we see a frog, a Bull Frog and it was a big fat Bull Frog. It was sitting on a Lily pad. This frog looked very wise and after talking to him a very few minutes, we found out the reason. He was an old M. H. C. Grad and had graduated with the class of 1492. He seemed to have kept tab on his Alma Mater because he knew all about the Senior class of 1927. This pleased us very much because we had graduated in that year. And were proud of it.

We first ask him about our very worthy President. "Why, Clara Belle?" said he. "Of course I remember and know her. She is one of the most charming matrons of Logan, W. Va., and we have just learned that her husband has opened a new office in Washington, D. C., and it seems that she will soon be showing the matrons of the National Capital how to entertain royalty."

True to proverb, Myrtle Lambert, our Vice-President, became a teacher. All Lamberts became famous as teachers, you know, and she is teaching in the little white school house on Tom's Creek, and has been for the past ten years.

Eloise Vaughan has always said she would be an old maid, so after having broken the hearts of one college president, numerous freshmen, not to say anything of the greatest banker in Huntington, she settled down in "A House by the Side of the Road," and is singing "All Alone," as she writes a book entitled "Flirts That Have Flitted."

Morris Harvey girls have at last won the State championship. And we wonder who the coach can be; she must certainly be a wonder. But when we found out, we were not at all surprisde to find it was our own wonderful guard who used to be Mary Burks. And we also find that two of the best players on the team are Mary's father's granddaughters.

Queen Bryant, after having graduated from Cincinnati Conservatory, is making a great name for herself. She is now in Europe and she delights her audiences with her marvelous playing, and also leaves dents in the hearts of many of the young men who see her and hear her play.

John Bradford is in the Hawaiian Islands, watching the grass skirts hula hula. He's a typical preacher, you know.

Earlie Crum is making a great name for himself as a Professor of Latin in Harvard University. This was his favorite subject when at M. H. A..

Elva Cackley has become a violinist of great renown. She is now with Madame Jeritza, and between acts people look forward to her playing with great anticipation.

Blanche Flowers, who always believed that love was the greatest thing on earth, now has something running through her kitchen besides hot and cold water.

Maxine Honaker is posing for an ad for Palmolive soap, and she is certainly bringing down the cash. Well, we always knew that that "school girl complexion" would help her some time.

THE HARVEYAN 1927

Joe Lanford has become the second Paderewski of the United States and foreign countries. We feel very proud to have had one of such great renown in our class.

Laureal May has become the greatest scientist of all times. He first came to limelight when he discovered that the tears of a rejected lover contained salt.

"Just a Little White House on a Little Green Hill," and there is where happiness reigns supreme. We can't imagine this couple having been married ten years and we wonder who it is. Then to our very great surprise we find that it is Harry Burgess and Aileen Ray. Oh! I mean Mr. and Mrs. Burgess.

Olive Riggleman is the History Professor of Greater Morris Harvey College. She stepped into Mr. Kirby's shoes when he went to what he called greater work. Will admit that his shoes were a little worn, but she has made a great success.

We wonder who that girl is that everyone in New York is raving about, and as we read the New York Times, we find that it is our own Dorothy Shoemaker, and she has become an artist's model.

Beale Yoak, with his marvelous voice, is singing from Station MHC, and Mr. Frog told us that that station has become the most popular one on the air. We swear that we are going to "tune in" and hear a great and familiar voice.

Eula Hash has "fired the inspiration" of many a poet with her curly hair. Gosh! Wasn't it pretty? Or do you remember?

Betty Allen Vallandingham, that girl who made the highest grades in our class, and she was valedictorian, by the way, has taken her mother's place as English Professor in M. H. C., and they say that she is rivaling all other members of the faculty for honors in her department.

Clama May, the vamp of our senior class, is in the movies. IN THE MOVIES! Can you imagine such luck? And she is making a great hit. She is the matinee idol of many a young sheik.

As a bareback rider, Fortune, the little circus girl in our Senior play, has become famous and is said to be one of the most graceful in the circuses of the world. You remember her? She was Mary Adkins.

Walter Staples is "on the air" with his uke. His "invisible audience" worships him and his fan letters require him to keep a private stenographer at all times.

Hansford Welch, as a short story writer, is one of the seven wonders of the world. He writes for all of the high class magazines and is nearly a millionaire they say.

Mrs. Leonard and Mrs. Adkins are living happily in their homes. Mrs. Leonard is living in the limelight of her son's career as an athlete of Greater Morris Harvey. He is one of the greatest since the year we became Golden Eagles, and Kelly Wilson was the ideal of every true and loyal Morris Harveyan.

Just then a whale appeared and the Bull Frog dived into the water. Well, we had learned all about our class but would have asked about the college Senior class had we had time. But we decided that we ought to be satisfied and off we paddled singing "IT'S TOO LATE NOW TO BE SORRY."

THE DEBATING CLUB

Morris Harvey Debating Club started this year with an amateur team, which, under the capable coaching of Professor Kirby, developed into a very promising team.

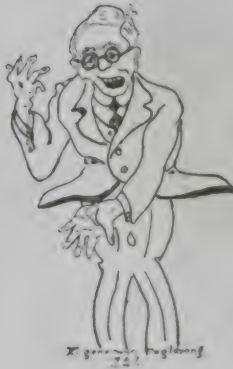

Two debates were scheduled with Concord State School this year. The negative team, Miss Mattie McNeer and Mr. Eugene Foglesong, won from Concord's affirmative team here on March 10. The affirmative team, Mr. Calvert Kelley and Mr. Paul McNeer, met Concord's negative team at Athens on the same date, where Concord won the decision.

The club has the material for some good debaters. Miss McNeer shows ability in logical thinking, and her strong rebuttal has power in the field of debating. Mr. Foglesong has sound argument and pleasing delivery. Mr. Kelley's debate showed hard work and thorough investigation of the field he presented. Mr. Sawyers did some faithful and creditable work. Mr. McNeer shows logical arrangement and power to retaliate in rebuttal.

Those trying out for the oration were: Mr. Ralph Cunningham, Mr. Doyle Yoak, and Mr. Kester Epling. Mr. Cunningham, who has represented Morris Harvey twice before in inter-collegiate oratorical contests, won in the try-out. Mr. Yoak is a polished speaker and an accomplished reader, while Mr. Epling has a cultivated delivery showing deep thought.

The Debating Club express their gratitude to their coach, Mr. Kirby, who has polished the members of the club to the point where they will do better work in the future.

SYNOPSIS

Jeffrey Wayne, a widower of sixty, marries Marie Pratt, a widow of forty. Wayne has a daughter, Mary, attending a private school, and Marie has a son, Tom, who is in college. Neither Mr. Wayne nor Mrs. Wayne tells the other they have children. While at school, Tom and Mary fall in love. Mary agrees to marry Tom provided he has the ability to earn a living. Tom applies to Wayne for a job. He is given a job but does not know that his employer is his mother's husband. At the same time Mary has a desire to see her stepmother, and she comes home in the make-up of the part she is to take in a school play. Lucerne Neville, a friend of Marie, calls unexpectedly and has sold a necklace in order to finish her preparation for the stage. She later finds out that the necklace is very valuable and belonged once to an English queen. While all are together in the living room, the lights go out and the necklace disappears. Wayne calls a police inspector and the blame is placed upon Tom, Mary, Miss Neville, and Nora, the housekeeper. In seeking the guilty party, the identity of the young people is made known. The older couple find that they are obliged to look kindly upon the love affair of the young people. The necklace is found and all ends happily.

COACH FULTON

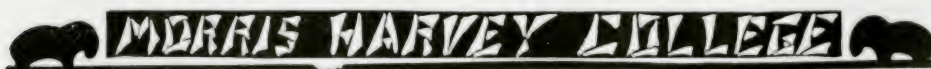

Coach E. M. "Brownie" Fulton, one-time star athlete in Morris Harvey, in football, basketball, baseball and track, was given command of athletics in the institution. Prospects for winning teams in the program for the year were not at all promising, since within the past few years circumstances did not permit of building and organizing on a foundation of raw material. But "Brownie" has proved that he is a leader and a builder as well as an athlete. During his absence from the state, athletics in West Virginia colleges developed so greatly that when he returned he found it necessary to restudy the situation. He found new problems, along with the old problem of athletic youth. But the coach surmounted these problems.

His team won some great victories. In football, the Red and Gold, with a new eleven, attacked one of the strongest teams in the state in New River State, and held them to a 12 to 0 score. Continuing, they had to face the best colleges on the schedule, and came out of it with three victories. It might have been said that they should have won more games, but they won more games this year than in the three previous years.

In basketball the team under their new name of "The Golden Eagles," ran away with their opponents, and triumphed over many of the teams that had been defeating the Red and Gold for three years. But their start was too strong, and near the end, they played as if burnt out, and lost to some of the weakest on the card. Much credit must be given to those who helped Coach Fulton. Although new men, Kelley Wilson, Ed Smith, Julius Vitez and Pete Zelazo strengthened the team's record with their spectacular playing. Of the veterans, Rhodes, Captain "Tad" Hager, Burns, Frantz and Ball played consistently and often saved the game by cool-headedness.

We are not able to record the record in baseball, and so, basing our conclusions on the records in football and basketball, we predict a glorious year in that sport, as Coach Fulton has a strong line-up, and the best pitching staff in the history of the institution.

PROLOGOS

A Drama in Two Actions

"Give me a little kiss."
"Not tonight, dearie."
"Oh, why not tonight?"
Ode to Duty, Trust and Fear,
Save our homes, wives and beer.
Let us live our lives serene—
Lives corked in a copper canteen.
Today is our day; tomorrow may not come—
Oh, save our homes, wives and rum!
In the gutter today; in congress tomorrow.
We'll get it—beg, steal, or borrow.
With grease on our fingers
And dirt on our nose,
We'll follow John Barley
Wherever he goes.
Oh!

Time—An evening in June.

Setting—Not setting but standing on the porch of a summer cottage. The pale incandescent rays of the sunset droop through the intertwining vines; and languidly flit across the floor. A rustic porch swing sways gently in the soft evening breeze.

He: "Can we meet?"

She: "Oh, why—oh, when—anywhere?"

He: "In the shade of the old oak tree, where the bumblebee skitters and flees."

She: "Oh! Oh!"

He: "No! No! We'll meet on the side of the mossy bank where the current swirls and sways."

Says She: "Goo, Goo!"

Says He: "You, you."

Says She: "Do! Do!"

Says He: "Ho! Ho!"

ACTION THE SECOND

Time—Two hours later.

They meet on the bonny bare banks of Boone—
He enticed, she in a swoon.
Just they two—save the blushing moon,
That perched in the sky and guarded the night
Pale and gold, its flickering light,
Wrapped in the arms of love, they walked
Arm in arm in the shadows they talked.

Says He: "Will you?"

Says She: "Oh!"

Says He: "Oh!"

Says She: "O—h!"

And the moon said, "O-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o!"

First, I query, what place has a page of humor in such a collection of sordid faces? And, there is humor enough, I say, though it all depends on the side one looks at the thing from; then, I suppose, as your point of view is fixed for you, you must take the side presented whether it be sunny or otherwise. Now, that was somewhat of a break, for there are several daughters presented in the weird compilation. It is natural that they cannot be sunny. Furthermore, or leastwise, girls don't have as many sides to be looked at as boys, so don't have as many chances of being sunny; and if these sides which girls don't have to be looked upon could be looked upon, chances are they wouldn't be sunny at all.

IN SONG

From a pair of green socks
One month from the wash
"Where the River Shannon Flows."
The socks were once clean,
But now to my nose
In fragrance serene,
"The Wild Irish Rose."

"Should Auld Acquaintance Be Forgot"
No danger, friend, I'll say,
If your feet still stink
Like a musty mink,
Or a rotten load of hay.

There was a young stude named Giesecke
Who wouldn't touch a drop of whisky,
But his nose was red when he went to bed,
And to explain, this is what he said:
"The night was dark; the moon shone clear;
The goblins gobbled far and near—
Like a silly clown a post swooped down
And struck my nose—that's why it's brown."

The Comet staff.

Teacher's _____es.
The Origin of the Species.

Freshie: "You remind me of a worthy man's promise."

Soph: "I'll bite, how's that?"

Freshie: "Because you are always full-filled."

Peas in the pod, peas in the shell,

Peas in the dish taste like
Home-made applebutter, ring the bell.
Beans for a week, aren't they grand?
Feed me beans, but leave out the
Ketchup of every brand.
Chop suey, soup, and peachy pies,
Eat is slow and watch for
Morning dews and summer skies.
"The half has never yet been told,"
But I am bashful and never bold.
Just follow this scheme through every line
And you'll catch the thought in time.
Just a simple thing, you see,
Leave out each line that's numbered three.

The night was dark and somewhat dreary
And I was sitting down,
And felt not quite so cheery,
And I looked upon the town
And smelled something queery:
Alac, alac, I rose and goes
Right softly on my toes
To see what 'twas all about
That caused so great a smell.
Behold, I saw an odious thing—
Our old Tom cat, you know, you know,
That died about a month ago,
Was dragged from our well!
That was nothing.
